AGRILEVANTE 2011

International Exhibition of Machinery,
Plant and Technologies for Agricultural Production

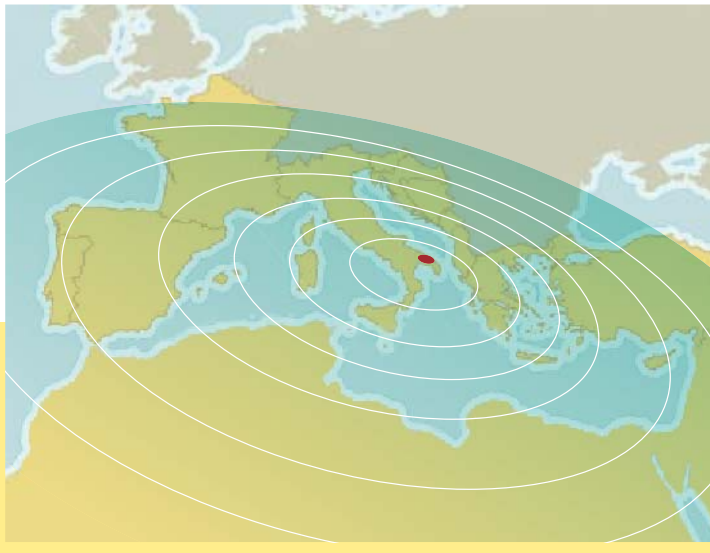

Bari, October 13 – 16, 2011

EXHIBITION DOSSIER

Business and internationalism.

The Agrilevante event, set for October 13 to in Bari, is now an international point of reference for businesspeople throughout the Mediterranean region, from the European and southwestern Balkans to the Middle East. Agrilevante displayed significant growth in 2009 in taking over an area of some 40,000 m<sup>2</sup> for more than 200 exhibiting companies. The number of visitors rose by more than 30%, to 33,000 businesspeople, plus 12 official foreign delegations. The 2011 edition promises even better results, thanks in part to the upgrading of the trade fair center.

From seeding to distribution:
the complete
production chain

From tilling and preparing the soil to seeding, irrigation, plant treatment and on to crop harvesting phases, transport and the first processing of the products, Agrilevante will present efficient solutions for entire production chains, including those for such non-food crops as raw materials for energy production. Agrilevante's strength lies in the specialized and professional characteristics of the event. Crops typical of the Mediterranean are at the heart of the review, those for which the mechanization industry is in a position to supply an extremely wide range of technologically advanced machinery and equipment. In this year's edition, a special focus will be trained on the olive and oil production chain.

Production chains, an exhibition format which creates opportunities.

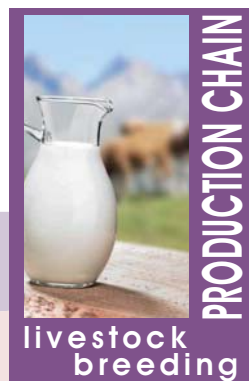

Facilitating meetings of companies and businesspeople is one of the objectives of the review with a layout divided into six great theme salons dedicated to cereal crops, energy and non-food production, the olive oil sector, fruit and vegetables, vineyard cultivation and wine production and livestock raising. Alongside the traditional sectors, Agrilevante 2011 will present an important display on Multifunctional Agriculture (MIA) featuring special conferences, workshops and roundtables covering all those activities geared to create additional income for farmers. In this setting, and with a demonstration area set aside, attention will be focused on renewable energy sources for which there are good prospects for development in the Mediterranean regions and throughout the entire Mediterranean area.
